

The Kuchroo Times

First and foremost, let me thank you for reading this first issue of the Kuchroo Times. It was a difficult project to start off from scratch, but with your support, I hope that the continued circulation of this paper will continue. This paper will include all of the components of a great newspaper and hopefully will capture your attention as it touches upon the world that revolves around the Kuchroo Lab. Please enjoy!

Headline

As we near the end of this week, we begin to wrap up the loose ends of the mouse database and usher in a hopefully streamline method of keeping up to date the whereabouts and records of the mice we breed downstairs. Though I realize that many of you have some feelings of discontent towards the structure of the database and feel frustration with the tediousness of inputting individual mice, I can assure you 110% that your efforts in the short term will pay off one hundred fold in the future. Thank you all for being so patient with the reconstruction of the database and also for contributing to the completion of it. You are all heroes in my book!

Lab Improvement

A long time ago, in a galaxy far far away, a being called RRM had made a suggestion to the lab for a Kuchroo Laboratory Espresso machine. Since that time long ago however, there had been no progress made towards the purchase of a machine that produces life. Now with a little bit of faith, chance and luck, I happened to come across a deal for an espresso machine for a very reasonable price. For only $69.00 plus shipping, we the Kuchroo Lab can purchase our very own espresso machine and live like kings and queens of the CND. Now I know many of you may be thinking, what is the point of purchasing such a machine for the lab when there is a thousand dollar machine outside in the NRB that we can just use. For those who require some persuasion, I have come up with a distinct differentiation between that hunk of junk outside and the one that we will have if we all decide to purchase this machine. This will be a special edition espresso machine that, for those who contribute to the purchasing of it, will have the opportunity to engrave their names into the side of the machine, forever immortalizing their existence here in the Kuchroo Lab for centuries to come. With 22 members of the lab, everyone can have the opportunity to take part in this historic milestone in the Kuchroo Lab. Though this accomplishment falls short of the glory of publishing a paper, I think that it's pretty darn close. With your approval, donations will be taken throughout the rest of this month which will all be put towards the purchase of the espresso machine and some espresso to actually use in it. $2-$5 and a little love is all it takes to bring another family member into the Kuchroo Lab. Also remember that each person that donates towards this purchase, will receive the honor of etching their name into the side of the machine for the rest of the world to gaze in envy of our beautiful machine.

Deal: Hamilton Beach Espresso & Cappuccino Maker $69 at Walmart.com Click Here

Discuss (0) : History : Tell : Posted 7:52 AM PDT 04/11/07 by Ben

Walmart.com has the Hamilton Beach Pump 40729 Espresso & Cappuccino Maker for $69 + shipping. Shipping is about $8; free in-store pickup in most locations.. Features 15-bar pump system, brews 1 cup of espresso at a time when using the pods; can brew 2 cups at a time when using loose, ground espresso. BizRate

The Kuchroo Times

Spotlight

This week's spotlight falls upon our newest addition to the Kuchroo Lab. Manu Rangachari is a University of Toronto Alumni, McMaster Alumni, and also a Vienna University Alumni. Some of his favorites include Radiohead, Weezer, and Franz Ferdinand, and he is currently "wishing that what he knew now, he knew ten years ago". He has recently sent out an email highlighting one of his newest duties, which is the ordering of Taqman reagents. What a fine job he's been doing at that as well. With many more years to have him around in the lab, the outlook of the Kuchroo Lab looks bright and cheerful with the addition of a hard worker and playful spirit that he brings to us. Though he has been here for some time now, let's give him a Kuchroo high five of love for our newest member. Cheers to you!

Etcetera

I believe that we should get a lab uniform that we could wear both inside and outside the lab to show off our Kuchroo Lab pride. Though I have not come up with a design that can encompass the greatness of this lab within the canvas of even an XXXL t-shirt, I have come across a few t-shirts that you may find amusing or even inspirational. I will take a poll in the coming issues to see which one you all like the most and with enough support and individual funding, it may be possible to provide these shirts to the lab members. The last one isn't a shirt, but you may like the mug as well. Of course each item will come with a personal lab engraving of KL4LIFE (Kuchroo Lab For Life for those of you who have not realized the meaning of this yet).

