

The Kuchroo Times

Dear Kuchroo Lab Members,
Here is the 18th installment of the Kuchroo Times. Though I apologize for there not being an issue last week due to extraordinary circumstances, here is your weekly dose of the Kuchroo Times. The Kuchroo Times will also be put online this week for everyone to enjoy. Though I will still be making the weekly paper delivery, for those of you who would like to experience some of the back issues or would like to share the Kuchroo Times with your friends and family, the Kuchroo Times will be available online for all of you to enjoy. Thank you again for all of your support!

Headline

Kuchroo Lab Summer Party a Smash Hit!

If there was ever a party not to be missed, this was most definitely it. With all of the elements of a great party; food, drinks, dancing, and of course, good company, this year's summer party was truly an event that will go down in the books. Just to recap for those who were unable to attend, the food was in one word...magnificent. As Dr. Sheng and I walked up to the house, a smell literally hit me in the face that instantly put me in a dreamlike state. My taste buds began to do a happy dance just thinking about what awaited us. With endless appetizers served and an even greater main course, it was truly a feast that would be envied by kings. The most memorable sight was the contraptions that the main course was served in. It was almost futuristic like as a time machine like contraption kept the food warm and harnessed the flavors of the food magnificently. There was one bottle that I noticed out of the collection of fine wines and other liquors that Dr. Kuchroo had in his house that struck me the most. It was one that is praised by the members of the hip hop world and it was most peculiar to see such an item in the house of someone so prominent in the scientific field. Like a golden rocket ship, the bottle of Cristal gleamed as subwoofers and rap music seemed to play through the bubbles floating inside of the bottle. I guess there's a lot more that I have to learn in my quest. The most memorable event however that I believe everyone can agree with was the dance party. Though I will refrain from naming names in order to keep the identities of the lab members private, Manu Rangachari and other lab members showcased a variety of dance moves that would make even the world's greatest dancers jealous. I don't think that just describing this portion of the party would do it justice, but as the pictures make its way to the lab website and the videos make its way to youtube...just kidding...I believe that they will speak for themselves.